As soon as this has dried the trench is ready to be filled up and the conduit line is fin-ished. A similar but smaller line is now successfully operated to the two Industrial buildings and Science Hall. A line is also planned for Ladies Hall, President's House and new buildings beyond.

By this method of heating the labor is reduced to a minimum as a day and night lireman can keep me heat for all the buildings from the central plant. The coal is all brought to the coal pocket where it is easily unloaded and the ashes taken away. Large boilers can be run much more economically than a number of small ones. The danger and insurance is much less for each building without

The exhaust steam after doing its work in the engine is 40 per cent. as efficient for heating and is all saved within the water of condensation, which is returned to the boiler as pure water and at nearly the boiling temperature.

The boiler room space is saved in each building and the boilers and chinney with its offensive smoke is removed to some out of the way place.

The system pays a good return on the investment as is proven at many of the eastern schools and institutions where it has been in successful operation for years.

The Iron Brigade A STORY OF THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC By GEN. CHARLES KING Author ol' Norman Holt,""The Colone Daughter,""Fort Frayme," Etc.

CHAPTER XXVI.

THAT A LUTTER REVEALED Once again had Lee's vallant army slewly retired to the Potomae and lelarely recrossed, superb even in defeat. Just as alter Antietum, the cabinet, the committee on the conduct of the war (that remarkable annex to our milltary systems and countless critics all over the north, stormed at the Army of the Potomac because it seemed to foliow at respectful distance, content to I t the erring brethren go in peace.

Then came the final resolution of the great war president, that as he and Hallack and Stanton had long tried, without success, the business of "bosaing ' armies in the field, it was time to turn the whole thing over to a aingle stage manager. Then came Grant and the heginning of the end. At this time, Fred Benjon, twice honorably menriened and recommended for the brevet et major, found himself again aummoned to Washington, this time a wit ness before a nillitary commission for the trial of one l'eter Jennings, civillan, for whose apprehension with a whele akin the First Virginia cavalry stood ready to pay a round anm and the "Stonewall" to supplement it with another, each claiming prior right to perlorate or sear that akin at aight. The Virginians awore that he sold informat'on to the federals, and had betrayed Ladue, of the Eleventh Alabama, Into their hands, even while Stanton and others at the war department were ready to swear the tall Virginian's life away to the charge of glving information to the rebels.

Among the papers in poor Ladue's possession was the original draft of the report he had written the commandlug officer of the Eleventh Alahama " his flight across the Potomac and capture by union cavalry near Mathias l'oint. Not until he reached a certain farmhouse near Port Tobacco did be throw who were the officers escaped from prison camp near Annapolis, and his joy was great when Jack Chilton appeared among them. He and Chilton were ferried over on a dark, wintry night, and landed at a fishermen's house three nilles below the Point, and there, to his influite concern, Paul found that he had lost his pocket memorandum book, well nigh filled with notes concerning the troops, also sketch maps of field fortifications, all of which he felt confident would be of value to Gen. Lee | Ihen there were private papers in the book of vaat importance to him if to no one else. A racking chill had come on as the result of exposure to the raw night wind, and Jack and the fisherman secreted him in a barn. Then Chilton deliberately went back to Maryland in search of the missing property. Thereby he escaped capture by the cavalry piloted by Jennings. When searched, Ladue was found to have no incriminating papers about litu-a disappointment to his captors and obviously a puzzle to Jennings -for Ladue heard him whis pering with the officer in command, The last Paul had seen of Clillton was that December night, but later he learned that he had been compelled to remain in hiding many weeks in Charles county before the vigilance of the Federals was again relaxed and he could finally effect his escape. Then there was a letter unfinished, for Ellnor, which fred had sealed and sent to her, and it was through her, four weeks later, that he learned that Paul well knew he had not long to live, and had really hoped to meet a soldler's store and had enlisted as a drummer In the Montgomerys after Paul'a banshment, had strayed in search of for-idden luxuries just hefore Chancellors, ille, and Stuart's men had nabbed hlm and run hlm off to Richmond where Ladue was favored with O'Toole's account of Mckinnon's bribing him to purioin those St. Louis letters. With this confirmation of his theories burning within him, Paul had gone to Charlottesville, spending one day with the Chiltons and hearing from the doctor a strange atory of McKlnnon'a generosity to them and kindness to the imperiled son. Rosalle had listened in alient acquiescence until Paul burst in with vehement denunciation of the whole story-told them of McKlnnon's treachery to him and his hatred of the Bentons,-told them of Fred's devoted friendship, and then came a strange part of the letter.

Elinor copied it verbatim:-"Miss Chilton grew more and more excited as I talked, and finally whirled on me with 'llow can you speak of devoted friendship on the part of a man who planned to capture you both and was only balked by-by Jack's going back for your old note book! Then she rushed out of the room, and I had to go right on to Gordonaville and could only write to her that, that too, was probably one of McKlinon's slandera, and there waan't a word of truth in it-that no one was more amazed than Fred when they brought me ln. I've not yet heard from her, but I shall, and Jack shall know the moment I can find him. "Was it not strange that that same old notebook, which she risked so much to send to me that night Fred caught her at the stone house, should later have been the means of aaving Jack? She found it in the breast pocket of my new uniform coat at Henry's. and glancing through the pagea saw the sketches and memoranda I had even then been making; supposed it was of vast importance, -nomething that we ought to have and, fearing it would fall into the hands of the enemy, bethought her of Jennings and Judge Armistead; slipped into my uniform, and Fred has probably told you the

So there it was at last -the story of her daring and devotion and Benton, had he but opened his heart to Paul In the few days that they were together at the Chiltons, might have known it all! There then was McKlnnon, furthermore, unmaaked, and even more of a blackguard than they had deemed him Now, at least, must Rosalle know how utterly ahe had wronged the man whose devotion to her she surely could not fall to realize, yet not a line from ber had found its way to Ellner There was some comfort in the belief that now she knew, huthow he longed to get at McKinnon for the war. further comfort!

And now that queer cuatomer, Jennings, was also under the ban, was dence Benton whose brevet hung fire There was little he could really tell of Jennings, though he had never forgotten that story about the Indiana sergeant aecing Roanlie tosa the packet to him in the rush and excitement at the stone house. If that story were true alle must have thought him faithful at the time at least. That fateful notebook, filled with I'aul'a clever topographical sketches and his daily memoranda-what had not Rosalle dared In her effort to send it to safe hands! What sacrifice had not Chilton made In recrossing the Potomac that wintry night in hopes of recovering it! Where was It now? thought Benton, as once again he caught aight of the unfinished dome of the great white capitol, A very suitable bit of property the little volume might be to a southern chieftaln again invading Maryland with an army at his back-and a very dangerous one for southern officer to be caught with-if alone!

CHHAPTER XXVII.

LOUNSBERRY'S LAST STING. Gettysburg had thinned the grand old First corps into the proportions of a small division. Consolidation became the watchword, and, with Reynolds dead and his successors devold of influence, it had none in power to preserve its autonomy. The Second, Fifth and Sixth corps retained their badges and their name. The Eleventh and Twelfth, sent to the west, were "telescoped" and called the Twentleth. The Third had fest Ita grip, with Sicklea' leg, at Gettyaburg-ltm way, with French's head, at Mine Run, and finally ita place and name—being distributed to fill the gapa in other organizations. As for what was left of the First, most of It, under gray-headed Wadsworth, went as the Fourth division to the Fifth corps, our old friends of the Iron Brigade ruefully ahedding the blood-red disk and decking their caps with the Maltese cross. But the story of several who set forth with them was still unfinished. Fred Benton, who had ridden with their battling line or many a bloody day, came not homeward with the few aurylyora. A atrange fortune had been his after Wadsworth fell. There had been many a reason, as has been told, for believing that the tail Virginian, Jennings, had played a double game from first to last, down the Shenandoab valley, with 12,- the latest intelligence from the front, Benton's evidence had little helped the 000 men and orders to atir up Maryprosecution, however, and when the land. No wonder Benton was affame with indignation, and narrowly did he egcape court-martial for the hot wrath of his reply. He demanded a court of Inquiry but to no purpose. There was little evidence but his own. Then Itenton was transferred for a time to the headquartera of the eavalry corps, and rode with Sheridan to Yellow Tavern, where the plumes of Stuart went down at last, and the brilliant leader of the southern horse was borne away to die within the walls of the weeping city, and here it was, after Yellow Tavern, Fred Itenton had one of the oddest, yet most opportune, meetings of Henton saw the Virginian was in deep chagrin. A question as to Louns berry'a whereabouts was all that was needed, and Winaton launched at once into a tirade. There never was such infernal luck, he said. For months three men had been hounding that fellow to get an accounting from him on a matter that-that-well. Pelham's alster had been engaged-at least belleved herself engaged-to Lounsberry ever aince early in the war, yet in January came the announcement of his approaching marriage to a widow of wealth and social position in Charleston. He had tricked Maud most damnably, said Winston, and Lloyd Pelham, the very young fellow who was so nearly killed trying to save Lounsberry out there near Gaineaville, a captain now and only 20, had been trying to get a fight out of him, and so had Jack Chilton, but Floyd had the best claim, and him in the face with his gauntlet. A meeting had been arranged for to-morrow morning. He, Winaton, was Pelham's second, and would almost give his parole, were auch a thing possible to an officer of Stunrt's cavalry, to get that fellow to book,

"You owe him a grudge as well as Maud Pelham's kinsmen," aald he 'Sooner or later he's got to fight or funk. I can't be there to second Pelham, and now there's no telling when any of us can get at him.'

Quickly he crossed the street, followed slong a hedge of rose bushes, turned sharply through the gate, and face to face at the trellised porch met the girl whom he had first seen sauntering along that leafy side street at Charlottesville in the spring of '62. Bearded, bronzed and stalwart as he was to-day, she saw nothing to remind her of the pailed prisoner of the Chiltons, and only indignation at eyes, but, in spite of gallant effort, she struck her colors at his very first word, when, with uplifted forage-cap he bowed and calmly addressed her:

"Miss Pelham, I believe, whom I had the pleasure of seeing at Charlottesville. I hope your brother is not wounded-and bere.

Then he repented him of his cruelty when he saw her sway and stretch forth her hand for the support of the railing at the steps. Jesus Prays for His Followers

Sunday School Lesson for May 14, 1905 Specially Prepared for This Paper

LESSON TEXT -John 17.15-26; Memory Verses 20, 21. Read chapters 16 and 17 GOLDEN TENT .- "I pray for them."

TIME. Thursday, late in the evening, minediately after the last leason, PLACE.—Either in the neper room at Jensalem, or on the way to Gechsemare. Comment and Suggestive Thought.

V. 15. "I pray." Jesus asks just what it is the heavenly Father's will to give. Not . . . out of the world." Undoubtedly the apostles wished they could die with Jesus, but Jesus' plan is that they shall stay in this world and carry on His work. "Keep them from cvil." Protect or deliver them from the evil which prevails in the world. We join Jesus in this petition when we prny, "Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil."

V. 16. "They are not of the world." When one begins to love Jesus, his motives are uo longer prompted by the principles of this world. He does not took to this world for reward, nor find his joy in worldly delights. This is because the heavenly life of Jesus has been accepted. In John 15.18-25, Jesus had told what it may cost one to be in the world but not of it.

V. 17. "Sanctify them." The word sanctify has several meanings. One is, to make holy. Jesus wishes us to grow daily more tike himself. Itnt, as here used, the word sanctify means to consecrate to God's service. "Through thy truth," or "In the truth." It is in the atmosphere of truth that the Christian life flourishes. "Thy word is truth." "Truth" is a very great word. It may well be taken as including all the actual, in dis-One Minute Cough Cure is right on | thaction from the seeming or unreal. Growing Economic Obstacle to Large Families

By GEORGE A. SCHOFIELD, Esq., House Member of Labor Committee in Massochusetts Legislature.

IIIE American father and mother of to-day, among the great laboring classes, are confronted, not by a theory, but by a

The laws have decided, and justly so, that our children must have the opportunity to acquire, and the privilege of enjoving, the blessings of at least a common school education. That means that the father of a large family must not only find food and shelter for his children, but that in the matter of clothing he must to the utmost of his ability, so far as is are contemptnously classed as "Ihms," permitted by the wage he carns, seek to provide suitable clothing, shoes, etc., for them, to the end that when they meet their associates at school they will present at least a neat and cleanly appear-

The natural pride of the American hey or girl will not permit him or her to appear in clothing that will make them either the objects of pit; only by the Italian and possibly by the or the butt of ridicule. Not only does their own pride cry out against it, but that of the mother or father would not, if it is possible to prevent it, 1 allow their children to be the target of either the laughs or the sneets of their more fortunate comrades.

Then it is that the American father and in ther find themselves placed in a position where the possession of large families means that, and frequently in religion. strive as they will, they are not able to do what they would like to do for heir offspring, without being "pinched" for the actual necessities of life

While all of this has been true for years, there is to day a new condiion springing up, which it would seem will make it harder in the future. That condition is brought about by immigration. I would not be undertood as being oposed to immigration, but that there is a class of unmigrants coming into the country of late years which will make "race stiride," as the president terms it, a necessity rather than a matter of choice. of Presidenters. They thus form a I do not think this can be successfully controverted. By this I mean the class of immigration that brings to our manufacturing centers-men

It has been said that immigrants such as I have mentioned been re-Americanized in a few years and then den and a better wage. That has been so in the case of the immigrants from a number of countries, but capital has met the improvement by bringing in a new let to all the places of those who will no longer be the "white slaves."

A short time ago I read that at a meeting of the men interested in this "for their sakes" that is, to set the cotton fields of the south the stat men, was made that the time had come when even in that section of low wages, long hours and child labor, apital felt that cheaper labor was dimanded and it was suggested that the Asiatic races, the dread "yellow peril," should be brought to our country. Smallpox is the easiest and mildest of diseases. It is not contagious and occurs only when a long illness has prevailed internally. It is not contracted from sources outside the hody, but is the external evidence of an
